JUDGE HORTON SETS THE HABEAS CORPUS HEARING FOR NOV. 24

2 Attorneys For West Request Release Of Defendant

PLEA IS FILED IN CIRCUIT COURT

Policeman Declares He Is Restrained From Liberty Illegally

Habeas corpus proceeding, instigated in the circuit court before Judge James E. Horton, seeking the release of J. Monroe West, now held in the county jail on a charge of murder, have been set by Judge Horton for hearing in circuit court here Tuesday morning, November 21 at 9:30 o'clock.

Mr. West an Albany police officer was placed under arrest on charges growing out of the killing of Asberry Murry, negro, during a raid by Officers West and Robert E. Stewart in the Oklahoma section several weeks ago.

The two officers were given a preliminary hearing before Judge William T. Lowe in county court Monday and on Wednesday morning Judge Lowe handed down a decision granting bond in the sum of $5,000 to Officer Stewart and remanding Officer West to jail without bond.

The proceedings were instituted by Attorneys C. L. Price and A. E. Griffith, defense counsel, Mr. Price having gone to Athens Friday to lay the plea before Judge Horton.

In his plea the defendant alleges that he is illegally restrained of his liberty and attaches as an exhibit to his plea the mittimus of Judge Lowe in remanding him to jail without bond.

Judge Horton in his order, directs Sheriff Poole to have the defendant in court on Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock to take up the allegations. Notice to the counsel for the prosecution has been given officially, the sheriff's return today showed.

'FRESHMEN CAPS' BANNED BY RATS

Question Is Decided By Popular Vote Of Classmen

(Associated Press)

UNIVERSITY, Ala., Nov. 21.—Freshmen students of the University of Alabama will not have to wear "rat" caps at least not this year. They have decided this question for themselves by popular vote.

When the state legislature passed a law some years ago, prohibiting hazing at the University, the little red cap, sign of the green freshman, passed into oblivion. Since then, several freshman classes have come and gone without donning the "rat" cap.

Agitation over whether or not to adopt the headgear voluntarily this year was started by a chance utterance on the part of an "old" man who said that the freshmen should consider the wearing of the cap a proud duty. The freshman class immediately split into two camps, for and against, and the war was on.

It was decided to settle the issue by a vote of the class. Speakers for and against the first year emblem took to the stump to proclaim their views, and the negatives won. The election, if such it may be termed, is thought to have been one of the hottest ever held on the campus.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 21.—When it was learned here that University of Alabama students had voted down the freshman cap this year, the general consensus of opinion was

Mobile Puzzled By An Explosion Rocking Houses

(Associated Press)

MOBILE, Ala., Nov. 21.—Mobile today was puzzled over the cause of an explosion last night which rocked houses and in some instances catapulted people from their beds.

The accepted theory here is that a small meteorite fell somewhere in the city and burst. It caused intense excitement throughout the city. The police department and newspaper offices were kept busy answering telephone calls. As far as could be ascertained last night, no damage was done.

SUSPECTED THIEF LEAPS TO FREEDOM

Was Shaken When He Jumped From Moving Train

(Associated Press)

WETUMPKA, Ala., Nov. 21.—Searching vainly through the night officers of Elmore county reported that no trace had been found of Roy Moore charged with grand larceny, who escaped from two guards and leaped from the Piedmont Ltd. near Millstead last night.

It was believed for a time that the man was Roy Dickerson, notorious bank robber but the report was denied this morning. It is understood that members of the train crew had identified him as Dickerson.

Moore was being transferred from New York to New Orleans where he was wanted by officials when the escape took place. He was under the care of W. C. Cain United States deputy marshal and George McDermott, New Orleans officer and was heavily shackled. These officers reported that Moore had asked for a drink of water and as the train was drawing from the town suddenly opened the door and leaped.

Cain had accompanied Moore to the water cooler and attempted to jump from the train in pursuit but was stopped by a member of the train crew.

Sheriff Golden was notified immediately. Officers attributed the reported mistake in identity to the marked similarity between the description of Dickerson and Moore.

Sheriff Golden based his denial that the man was Dickerson upon Marshal Cain's report to him. It seemed that only two or three persons partly identified the man and their statements as to him being the bank-robbler were vague.

Authorities at Kilby prison this morning said they did not believe the man was Dickerson in that New York's official identification of the man through finger prints in their possession would have shown him to be Dickerson.

Denies Rhinelander Suit Settlement

(Associated Press)

WHITE PLAINS, Nov. 21.—Despite persistent reports that the Rhinelander annulment suit will be settled out of court, Isaac Mills, counsel for Leonard K. Rhinelander, the wealthy young plaintiff, today said definitely the case will continue.

"I am in complete control of this case," he said. "It will continue. There have been no negotiations for a settlement. A statement will be made in court on Monday morning."

It was the introduction of two mysterious letters, written by Leonard to his negro bride, Alice Beatrice Jones, that caused yesterday's adjournment of the case to Monday to give counsel for Rhinelander an opportunity to investigate them.

The letters admittedly contained sensational testimony and their contents, apparently had not been known by Rhinelander's attorneys until Lee Davis, counsel for Alice, revealed them privately.

It is persistently reported that rather than have the letters made public, young Rhinelander would withdraw the suit. Reports were circulated a

Handling Of Highway Situation Called a Gigantic Fraud

(Associated Press)

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 21.—Governor Myrion Ferguson, for the second time in a few weeks, today faced the possibility of a special session of the legislature to investigate her state department and heard the word impeachment used in connection with her administration.

A call for a special session was by Representative T. K. Irwin to "impeach any state officer who has aided or abetted in any way this gigantic fraud upon the people of the state."

He said he referred to the highway situation. The call follows judgment for $600,000 rendered yesterday in the district court of Austin, Texas, against the American Road company in the suit brought by Attorney General Dan Moody to cancel the company's road contracts in this state.

Representative A. A. King, several weeks ago, issued a call for a special session but could not obtain sufficient signatures. Irwin's call is in the form of a petition to Speaker Lee Satterwhite, who said several weeks ago that he would call a special session if Governor Ferguson did not do so. The petition requires 50 names.

SEWER ORDINANCE BEFORE COUNCIL

Measure Of Alderman Buck Passed On First Reading

The sewer ordinance, providing for construction of new sewer later in the hospital district, to cost approximately $15,000, was passed on its first reading Friday night by the Albany city council, meeting in regular session. The ordinance was introduced by Alderman Buck. Members of the council believed that the new sewer lines would prove a welcome improvement for the section they will serve.

No action was taken by the council on the plan to obtain more room for the Morgan county health department and the Tennessee Valley laboratory. The matter of changing several lights in East Albany was referred to the committee for further consideration.

The petition of the Dixie Manufacturing company for exemption from taxation for a period of five years was granted, with the exception that the school tax will be collected.

Mr. Petty was granted permission to make a moving picture film on Second avenue Monday afternoon, under the supervision of Chief of Police J. N. Hendrix.

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Nov. 21.—Long before dawn today David C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, was on his way to Michigan City to begin serving a life sentence for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer, of Indianapolis.

Hours before this quiet county-seat town was awake, its best known resident for the past seven months, was hurried away in a motor car. The prisoner was not shackled nor handcuffed. Only a few newspaper men, who had kept watch over the Hamilton county jail since Judge Will M. Sparks yesterday declined to stay the sentence one month, witnessed the departure.

They followed the officers and the prisoner in a second car. Stephenson's attorneys yesterday asked that he be kept here one month while they prepared a petition for a new trial.

Smiling and apparently in good spirits, he left the narrow cell where he has been held without bond for almost seven months. He was still confident that "the last chapter" has not been written and that he will ultimately win his release.

MINISTER INJURED AS MACHINES CRASH

Rev. Barnes Suffers An Injured Knee, Negro's Fined In Court

Rev. W. D. Barnes, pastor of the Ninth Street Methodist church, today, is nursing an injured knee as result of an automobile crash late Friday at the intersection of Fourth Avenue and Moulton street. Dr. E. E. Beard, who was in the car with the popular pastor, escaped with exception of a minor injury to his arm.

Trillie Jones, negro, said to have been driving the car which collided with that of the minister, was given a fine of $100 and costs in police court this morning on a charge of driving a car while intoxicated and $50 and costs on a charge of having in his possession prohibited liquors. A street sentence also was added in one of the cases.

Dr. Barnes stated that when his car was struck, it was turned around, the negro's machine being turned over. Two others were with Jones at the time, but none of them was hurt, it was said.

SHORTAGE IS FOUND BY CENSUS BUREAU IN ESTIMATE YIELD

New Orleans Market Sees Recovery To $5.00 Bale

ESTIMATE NOW IS 15,298,000 BALES

Ginnings Total Is Now Placed At Twelve Million Mark

(Associated Press)

NEW YORK Nov. 21.—Cotton prices advanced $4.50 to $5.00 a bale today on a violent covering movement, which followed publication of the government crop estimate, showing a decrease of 88,000 bales compared with figures of November 1. December sold up to 21 cents a pound and January to 20 1/2.

WASHINGTON Nov. 21.—Cotton production this year probably totaled 15,298,000 bales the department of agriculture announced today. A fortnight ago 15,386,000 bales were forecast. The production last year 13,627,936 bales.

The forecast of production was based on reports of condition, abandonment, probable yields, ginnings and etc. until November 14 and upon the assumption of average crop influence during the remainder of the harvest season. Indications point to a yield of 165.5 pounds per harvested acre compared with 166.4 pounds indicated from November 1 condition and 157.4 pounds the final yield per acre harvested last year.

The indicated yield per acre and indicated total production in Alabama was 186 pounds per acre; production 1,315,000 bales.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Cotton of this years crop aimed prior to November 14 totalled 12,249,935 running bales, counting round as half bales and excluding linters compared with 11,162,235 bales to that date last year and 8,869,498 in 1923. The census bureau announced today.

The total ginnings prior to November 14 in bales for Alabama was 1,241,866.

NEW ORLEANS Nov. 21.—The government cotton crop estimate of 15,298,000 bales proving smaller than expected and a total ginnings to November 24 of 12,249,935 bales very much unlooked for caused prices to advance 97 to 106 points. This represented a recovery of the prices ruling just before the report was issued of approximately $5.00 per bale.

SYNOPSIS
A mysterious craft halts the yacht in Long Island Sound and six men climb aboard. It has been a night of wild adventure, with much talk of bootlegging and revenue officers. On the yacht are Connemara Moore, Dan Lacy, McTish, Pouch, Dot and Swede, all strangers to each other except Dot and Swede. Connemara want to announce her engagement to night, or be disinherited. Instead, she tells away from Aunt Celimena's Connecticut home—only to endure all this.

CHAPTER X—Continued
For a second, the eyes of the girl under the white turban, no whiter now than her face, peered over the cockpit, trying to make out the types of those engaged in the melee.
A glimpse of the one in advance she caught—a big thick-chested man, coatless, with a torn and disreputable jersey that seemed several sizes too small for him and a battered derby on his head, two big horns of hands flailing through the air.

Now Connie had never seen any fights except on the screen, and in the daily public turmoil of our subways. And this had a sort of private character about it, out here of the lonely water, to which the Cell in her rose with a queer exultation.
Suddenly she was excited rather than frightened. Her breath came faster, and at that moment she became aware of Lacy engaged with the leader. The Swede was the heavier of the two, but Lacy seemed to Connemara's anxious eyes to be more than holding his own, in spite of that handicap. There was a sure drive to his arms, left and right, left and right, to ribs and face.

Connemara leaped into the sea.
several blows almost landing on the point of the jaw, which she remembered to have heard was important; and all this while he kept lightly inside of the other's wild swings which flashed around him, missing him entirely or else only shaving his well-modelled head.

It was pretty, she thought, even in the midst of her concern; she could almost understand why women could attend prize fights. Only, even now, she could not, somehow, make herself believe the scene before her was quite real. After a time she would wake up back at Moorelands. In her own bed, and there'd be still that ridiculous problem about Salt and Bing to decide for Aunt Celimena. Then a little cry escaped her and her whole body tensed. The Swede was falling, like a ball she had seen once in a Spanish arena—that same keel and shudder, drop to the knees, the same sickening thud! He was down—motionless.

Impulsively Connemara clambered out of the cockpit, and at once regretted her precipitousness. She had entirely forgotten the others on the deck, who for reasons of revenge had piled on the doughty Scot, and now, having apparently finished him, were climbing all over Lacy from behind.

But it was too late to retreat to her refuge in the cockpit. She was conscious of a pair of eyes in the ugliest face she had ever seen, glaring at her. The owner of the eyes, with a gorilla-like hunching of head, neck and shoulder, started toward her. Back, back she retreated to the rail and reached it just as Mc-Tish coming to, slid overboard.

A moment only she calculated, though "calculated" is hardly the word—it was her instinct that was functioning quite as rapidly and as wildly as her heart was pounding—then she did it. There was another splash overboard. McTish, just

CHAPTER XI Kermis Roosevelt

By Kermis Roosevelt

When Mr. Brewster turned away from the telephone with that last startling information about Connemara's fight, there was a moment of decidedly tense silence, which was finally broken by Aunt Celimena.

"There—must be some mistake," she said in a trembling voice almost ludicrously unlike her usual dictatorial assurance. "What are we going to do? We—we can't just stand around and wait for news."

Bing Carrington took an impulsive step forward. "You're not to worry," he said gently. "Of course we'll do something. Miss Moore.
It seems to me that the first move is to have a talk with that desk sergeant at police headquarters. I'll take one of your cars, if I may, and go right over."

But Aunt Celimena had herself in hand once more.
"I am going with you," she announced with determination.
Bing looked doubtful. "If I have anything to report, I'll telephone you at once, of course," he demured. "But I really don't think—"

"It's not necessary that you should —Aunt Celimena was recovering rapidly as may be seen. "I wish to talk to that policeman myself." Mr.
Brewster put in nervously. "I feel sure I had better accompany you."

Aunt Celimena nodded absently, fixing an inquiring eye on Salt-on-stall Adams, who had as yet taken no active part in the discussion.
The latter roused himself hurriedly from the dazed abstraction which had enveloped him ever since that soft and shining red curl of Connemara's had slipped out of its tissue paper package into his astonished palm.

"Naturally I'm going, too," he said simply. "Shall we keep together, Carrington, or divide our forces?"

Better keep together at first,"
Bing decided. "Later we'll see."
It was Bing, with his usual cock-sure assertiveness, who fell naturally into command of the situation, and none of the other three cared, apparently, to dispute him. Even Aunt Celimena seemed rather relieved than otherwise, in spite of her earlier snappishness, to rely on his judgment now.

Therefore, ten minutes later, with Bing at the wheel, the search party of four was heading by motor for the Greenwich police headquarters.
Here, to their relief, news awaited them. The stolen car had been traced to the ferry.
"At least we'll know we're not travelling in the opposite direction, as we might easily have done," said Celimena sighed. She had lost a good deal of her usual belligerency during the short run from Moore-lands, as Bing noticed with appreciation. She had become further depressed, too, after a few words exchanged with a very noncommittal and unimpressed desk sergeant in the Greenwich police station. The fact that the heiress presumptive to Moorelands had disappeared without explanation, and under decidedly questionable circumstances, appeared to mean little or nothing in Sergeant Flynn's existence. But he did exhibit a lively curiosity as to why two of the searchers should wear fancy dress under their long polo coats. He seemed, too, to entertain wholly unreasonable suspicions of a slight somewhere, aimed at his official dignity.

Before proceeding further, Bing set to work to raise Bayville by telephone, and after much exasperating delay succeeded in rousing a sleepy Central, but the ferry office wouldn't answer, and apparently no police station existed. So, after a brief consultation with the other searchers, Bing headed the car back to Stamford.

12 Years AgoFrom The Daily of November 21, 1913

A big barn, belonging to E. H. Peck, on his lot just back of Second avenue, burned this afternoon.

Reports from the bedside of Mr. Hardaman, who was injured in a Louisville and Nashville wreck last night, were that he is improving today.

The opening session of the D. A. R. will be held in the Decatur city hall on the evening of December 2.

Kuhn's Five, Ten and Twenty-five cent store will be opened on Second avenue Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Luke Prior, of Harris, were visitors here yesterday.

There is a time in every man's life when success knocks at his door—but some of us reach up into the years before we will hear it.

It is said that it is very difficult to distinguish between chicken pox and smallpox, but we do not feel that this applies to the patient.

Another unexplainable event is recorded in New Jersey where a dashing young lover killed his sweetheart and left a note saying, "It was all for love."

Louis Mann who appeared here last night in a delightful performance declared in an interview that he loved the South. Well he has been far and wide and should be a pretty good judge of people and sections of the country. We can return the compliment.

It might not be a bad idea for the Tennessee Valley to employ Wallace Wade, University of Alabama football coach, to come up here and teach us team-work.

FOOTBALL STAR EXPECTED TO RETURN THIS AFTERNOON

As the referee's whistle sounds at the end of the season for the football team, scores of reporters will rush upon the "Red" Grange, the most talked-of athlete in the country today, and attempt to get from Grange a word or two. He tends to do, now that he has served out of collegiate athletic competition and is anyone of the numerous professional offers.

For days Grange has been the target of reporters who were seeking the same information. Grange has been unable to practice with his team for several days. Grange has been bothered in every way imaginable, almost. That, however, is all a part of the price Grange has been paying for the fame he has earned because of his gridiron exploits.

Now that his career comes to an end Saturday afternoon, who is there to say that he should not take up one of the professional offers which will give him financial independence? All of us like to ponder on the freedom of amateur athletics from the stain of professionalism, but do not forget that Grange has given to Illinois, with out cost, what professionals were quite willing to pay a fortune for. Has his contribution not been enough?

Grange will graduate this year. He owes money which he had borrowed to defray the cost of his college education. It is not reasonable that he should pick the quickest way to recoup his finances? That is what any other student would do, and no exception should be made in the case of Grange, because he happened to be the greatest backfield star in a decade.

BEE LINE HIGHWAY GIVEN RECOGNITION AS PART OF THE NATIONAL SYSTEM

Those who have labored long and earnestly for the success of the Bee Line highway, since the days when the route of the original Jackson highway was grabbed by other sections, will find much to please them in the announcement that Secretary Jardine has given his approval of the plan for the marking of a national highway system, including the Bee Line highway as the route from the great lakes to the South.

The Bee Line highway will be designated officially as route 31 and as such will be included on the government's road map, which is being arranged in answer to the thousands of demands from tourists who are baffled by the chaotic road markings now in use. Under the government system, a tourist can start in almost any section of the country, take the government map, pick out his route and proceed with little difficulty to his destination.

The network of roads officially designated by the government includes only 75,884 miles of road, a large number, it is true, but small when it is considered that the total is only a fraction of the grand total of 2,366,000 miles of road in the United States. As other routes are built and mapped they too will receive government designation and become a part of the national system.

It is gratifying that the Bee Line highway will not have to wait, as many other highway systems will. The Bee Line, to the people of this section, is the most important link in their road system and the whole of Alabama is glad that the government has seen fit to include it.

The Bee Line is the only highway in the state which traverses Alabama from the north to the south.

The reason for Alabama's intense interest in the success of the Bee Line highway is apparent. The Daily sincerely hopes that the people of this state will continue to manifest that interest. Tennessee now is completing the last link in the road in that state. Alabama is building a bridge across the Tennessee river at the Bee Line crossing here and plans to build at once the link which will serve partially to connect the paved road to Cullman with the paved road in Jefferson county.

Thus, the Bee Line highway gradually is being completed. With the government's designation and unofficial sanction, additional tourist travel over the road is certain. Let us keep the good work going, for the Bee Line is really Alabama's own.

AMERICAN SYMPATHY GIVEN AS EXPLANATION OF THE UNUSUAL POPULARITY OF COOLIDGE

Republicans speak with pride of it, Democrats do not like to admit it, but whether we like it or not, the fact remains that Calvin Coolidge has a strange attraction for the American people and many contend that he is one of the best-liked presidents.

In view of the fact that he comes from New England stock which is noted for its austerity, and the additional circumstances that Mr. Coolidge, himself, does nothing to draw people to him, his popularity remains something of a mystery.

Bruce Bliven, a contributor to the current issue of Harper's, offers the suggestion that Mr. Coolidge draws many Americans to him by virtue of the Cinderella incidents which have marked his public life. Mr. Coolidge did not seek the presidency in the ordinary manner. The job became his own as a result of circumstances over which he had no control. He tackled a hard task without alibi nor requests for sympathy, and Mr. Bliven asserts Americans recognize in his career somewhat of a prototype of Cinderella.

Be that as it may, the suggestions of the author furnish an interesting subject for speculation and it may be that his summary, quoted below, really tells why a public man, without any magnetic qualities to speak of, suddenly finds himself so deeply esteemed that his political advisers are urging him to break all precedent and attempt to obtain a third term in the white house. Mr. Bliven writes:

"Many commentators on public affairs have, I think, overlooked the great sympathy Mr. Coolidge has accumulated among people who feel that he has since August, 1923, been confronted by a hard and big job for which he 'never asked.' The mood is not unlike that in which one sees a substitute musician suddenly called upon to give a concert, unprepared. You applaud not so much the performance as the pluck with which it is undertaken. We have in America an inveterate sentimental attachment for the under dog or any one who seems to be appearing in that role; Jack gets all our cheers and we have only hisses for his giants; we prefer our princesses to be Cinderellas. While Mr. Coolidge never has sought in the slightest degree to capitalize any such sentiment as this, there is no doubt that the feeling exists and works powerfully in his favor. To the common man he seems, quite correctly, to be in many ways just a common man himself. He photographs in the movies as well as possible, from this point of view, that is, he looks acutely miserable, self-conscious and ashamed. Every man who has felt that way when facing a photographer's lens has a fellow feeling at once. A few months ago the news reel caught the President paying a visit to his son John when the latter was a member of a citizen's training camp. The boy stepped forward and saluted his father smartly. The latter, obviously not knowing what the dickens is the etiquette when the President meets a corporal who is also his son, hesitated, looked unhappy, and finally took off his hat! No one could see the episode without feeling sorry for the central figure. Politically, to have forty million people view it on the screen was worth at least three of those major victories over Congress which are so hard to obtain."

A TRAIN OF THOUGHTS for the Sabbath and Other Days

BY J. E. BLAIR

The jury did not know whether or not the Doctor, who "love murdered" his daughter "knew right and wrong." I say he did not, or else he would not have interfered against God's law: "Thou shalt not kill." The doctor came clear in a man's court but unless he had been living up to his privilege as to divine leadership—what shall his future be? We do well to remember that theologians agree that Adam and Eve first sinned in that they refused divine leadership, and chose their own wills and wisdom. The fact that a considerable portion of the press seems to agree that the physician in question did right to kill his daughter, and that some have suggested that "love murders" be legalized all go to show that Adam and Eve are not the ONLY persons who put "auto-suggestion" above divine leadership!

Bishop Henry Clay Morrison now dead but who still speaks, once said at Albany, Ala., that he would not allow a Methodist Episcopal minister to preach in one of his conference if "he believed in auto-suggestion regarding Moses." And if that great Bishop were here today he would be active against the modern idea of self-determination! He would agree that the doctrine expressed in the words, "I am the captain of my soul and the manufacturer of my own salvation," is a very damnable heresy! It would not hurt for the church to get after that heresy as well as to keep on after the so-called "modernists."

Some might say that all intelligent persons must perforce be guided by their own intellects. But they are NOT. Laws made without our consent govern us; laws sent down to us from Mt. Sinai govern us. A thousand things hedge us about and hold us to the way of civilization—just as crutches uphold a man with bad legs! A still small voice speaks to us and tells us that "there is a way that seemeth right unto man—but the end thereof is death." That "seeming" right way meant the death of a poor sick daughter, whom God may have healed later. As regards the killing of that girl, in a word the world will not stand for it, any more than Americans of right leadership will stand for fool ideas about gambling Sabbath desecration, free-love, etc. Just as sure as banners in the armistice day parade this year at Birmingham bore the words, "Peace" and "We teach world friendship," God is leading those who will follow Him to life of peace and contentment. Those who want to get in God's triumphant march to glory can do so, but human reason will never make them do it! "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God," and the opposite is true—they who are NOT led by the Spirit of God are not the sons of God.

DANGER IN FOUL AIR FOR ANY INFANT(Adults Usually Can Resist Infections of Respiratory Organs, But a Baby's Tissues Are Too Tender To Do That.)By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND.

I WAS at a moving picture show the other night. The last person in the world I expected to see in such a place was a baby two or three months old. But there was the baby!

I don't blame the mother for wanting recreation. No doubt this was the first outing she had had for months. The whole family was enjoying it—baby, father, mother, another child in arms and a third child.

That is, I assume the baby should be included in the entertained class, although the poor thing didn't appear to be having a good time. Anyhow I heard whimpering and observed a good deal of restlessness.

The fact is—and I want to be kind and considerate—that baby had no business in the crowded place. I don't care whether it is a movie, a theatre or a church—a baby is out of place in a crowd.

It is a remarkable thing that a baby born in a house of six rooms has twice the chance to live as another baby born in a house of three rooms. A baby is such a tiny thing that it does not seem necessary to give it a lot of space. But it must have air space—it is to live in infancy.

The great majority of babies who die in their first year die within the first year are snatched away by intestinal or respiratory diseases. The brood chills or pneumonia. Little organs are peculiarly liable to disease in infancy.

The more fresh, pure, dustless air a baby breathes, the less likely is that particular infant to have colds, bronchitis or pneumonia. Little babies are susceptible to the germs of respiratory diseases. When they contract these ailments they are far more likely than adults to suffer seriously in consequence. To guard the infant against such infections is the first duty of the parent.

The trouble is that lots of young mothers don't know the dangers of contaminated air. Nobody has ever told them. That is—by I am trying to point out why the tiny baby should not have been at the movie the other night. It is had enough for grown-ups to stay for hours in poorly ventilated places, but for babies it is out of the question. We should take pains to encourage the proper ventilation of all public gathering places. The owners, perhaps, have never come to realize the duty they owe to the public. But every such place should be kept clean, should be aired out daily and provision should be made for an abundance of fresh air.

Board Is Flooded With Inquiry Of State Condition(Associated Press)
MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 20—

A veritable flood of questions relative to the possibilities of Alabama both industrially and agriculturally has forced the state board of agriculture to adopt definite and efficient means of dispensing information to persons interested in the South and its development. A prosperous outlook for the section, and Alabama particularly, is held to be the reason for the greater part of the requests received here for information.

The division of industries of the agriculture department is carrying a large part of the work of telling the nation about Alabama. Howard C. Smith, head of the department is in charge of this work.

Mr. Smith, in answering queries about the state, first asks some questions himself. He sends to the prospective settler, a questionnaire sketched out to give the department a definite idea of the knowledge desired in each case. In this manner it is felt that information that will really be useful can be passed on with the smallest amount of work and time possible.

A questionnaire used to determine just what information is necessary for the prospective farmer is an example. At the top of the sheet it is explained that, "in answering many inquiries in the course of a year, and from the entire United States, it has been found necessary to know a basic number of facts concerning anyone intending to come to the Southland before it is possible to advise them with a full knowledge of surroundings, and at the bottom are 17 questions, calculated to give the department workers a definite idea of the questioner by his answers.

These questions, properly answered show clearly the kind of farming to be undertaken, experience had in handling negro labor and other pertinent facts.

The first question asks for the age of the applicant; the second the number of persons in the family able to help with farm work and the third the locality in which the applicant was reared. All of these questions are held to be especially important in that they help to establish a choice of location for the prospective settler. Other questions bring out the questions of capital and adaptability of the applicant to conditions in the state. Still others are included to inform the department of the applicant's attitude towards co-operation with progressive farm programs and why the South appeals to him.

Department heads have found that applicants are generally willing to answer these questions to the best of their ability, and so far the questions have enabled the department to send out much well directed information.

THOUGHTS OF THE WEEK

THE CHRYSANTHEMUM

Who has not admired the beautiful chrysanthemum blooming in a riot of beautiful colors when the last rose of summer is faded and gone. These beautiful flowers come just at the time when practically all other blooming plants have ceased, and affords a setting which is beautiful indeed to behold.

They give off an odor most pleasant and invigorating, and are to all intents and purposes the go between flower when the rose and others have filled their mission.

They might be called the cheer up flower as they bloom their best in any out of the way place, and with some attention rival all other known varieties.

The many varieties of roses are beautiful and odoriferous; the flaming tulips afford the eye something indeed pleasant to look at; the varieties of asters in their season rival many of the flower varieties; borders of pinks lining the walkway to the home present a myriad of beautiful and sweet scented blossoms, but coming at the season when these have spent their loveliness, the chrysanthemum is in a class by itself and takes the blue ribbon at the flower shows without any argument.

This beautiful flower is seasoned with sweet essences from all the months and seasons of the year, and awakens from its winter slumber when the first warm rays of the spring sun causes its germ life under the soil to bestir, and there comes forth tender shoots hastening to fulfill their mission producing the stems upon which the beautiful blossoms are to hang.

With spring over, the rays of the scorching summer sun process it for the blooms of the autumn, and at this particular season of our year it asserts its blooming qualities with myriads of handsome and hardy blossoms.

How like the life we live, from childhood to age, processed by the joys and sorrows which come into the life of all. In the springtime of life the sun shines brighter, the birds sing sweeter, the happy haunts of childhood present a more inviting appearance and this is but a process for the sterner things of life when the season of youth is outdistanced. Like the chrysanthemum when the autumn of life comes it is our privilege to have lived a life of helpfulness, cheering the lonely spots we may pass on our way, and putting some happiness where sorrow dwells, until at last the full bloom of a well spent life radiates a perfume to all with whom we come in contact, beautifying the place we occupy, and thereby reap the blessings and satisfaction and give to the world a blossom of fragrance which is beautiful to behold.

MRS. ZENO BAILEY, CLUB HOSTESS

Child Culture, in a number of different phases, is being studied this year by the Mothers Club and on Friday afternoon of this week, the subject under discussion was "Child Culture, Literature and Languages." Mrs. Zeno Bailey was the hostess at this time at her lovely home on Sherman street.

Papers given by Mrs. W. G. Gardner, Mrs. T. M. Jones, Jr., and Mrs. B. M. Bloodworth treated the subject in several ways. Supervising the child's reading, Mrs. Gardner's paper brought out the evils of the wrong kind of literature being put into the hands of the child and young reader, and of the immediate and lasting good of their reading the right kind of literature. The wealth of expression in the English language was the theme of Mrs. Jones' talk in which she told especially of the dangers of the use of slang and improper language that is confronting the American public today. In connection with the discussion of the right place of fables and fairy tales in the child's education, Mrs. B. M. Bloodworth, stated that many parents made the grave error of dispensing with this most important part of story telling to the young child. These parents take the stand that they think it is harmful to tell any tales except those formed on real facts. Not only are the morals in the fairy tales presented in a most pleasing way but they also build up the imagination in a manner that is most beneficial in later life. A very appropriate Thanksgiving reading was given by Miss Jean Draper in a charming manner.

During the social hour, Mrs. Bailey served dainty refreshments assisted by her mother and sister, Mrs. Brad Bibb and Miss Mary Augusta. Bibb who were guests of the club at this meeting.

ALBANY P. T. A.

The Parent Teachers Association of Central Albany opened their meeting on Thursday afternoon at the Junior high school with the singing in concert of "America." A short but very delightful program followed. Miss Elizabeth Ann Hutson gave a very enjoyable reading after which Mr. Hagerman gave two French harp solos.

Business was then taken up. Reports were heard and these showed splendid work was being done. The chairman of the cafeteria committee reported that $1246 had been taken in to date, a very small percent having been cleared. However she stated that it was not the aim of the Association that any profit be realized on the Cafeteria as it was established for the benefit of the school children so that they might have proper nourishment at the noon half hour recess. It was voted to support the special car that would be out on for the Thanksgiving football game that would take place between the Huntsville High and the Albany high. Parents were urged to attend and allow their children to go. It was decided to accept the offer of the Kiwanis club that they serve them their weekly meal for the ensuing six weeks. It was also urged that some member attend the Educational dinner to be given in Birmingham on December 10th.

Mrs. Theo Gamble and two children will arrive Sunday to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Hildreth.

Eugene Morrow, Jr., will spend Thanksgiving with his uncle, Johnny Bouche in Anniston.

MISS ESSLINGER TO APPEAR IN CONCERT

MISS NELL ESSLINGER, Contralto

The Music Study Club of Albany, Decatur, in presenting Miss Nell Esslinger, Contralto, Huntsville, Ala., to a local audience has arranged one of the most enjoyable events of the entire musical season, according to views given by various other papers, published in the cities in which the accomplished contralto has appeared in concert.

The following is taken from the columns of the Whitestone Herald, Long Island:

"The Musical Members will be giving an opportunity to hear an already beautiful voice, a voice that is a great voice in the making. The singer will be Miss Nell Esslinger of Huntsville, Ala., a young contralto who is doing intensive study with the Masters here. It is very easy to predict that those who have this opportunity to hear Miss Esslinger for the small admission price, will one day be glad to pay extravagant box office prices to hear her again." Miss Esslinger is appearing in concert at the Decatur High school auditorium Tuesday evening, November 24.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By Annie Laurie

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:

I am a girl in my teens and like a certain young man of my age. He came to the house several times, and my mother liked him very much. But then the neighbors began to tell things about him which were not true. And after that my mother refused to let me see him or talk to him over the phone. It is very anxious that we continue our friendship and try to live down the lies that have been told my mother.

Would it be right for me to continue my friendship?

G. If you know that these tales are untrue, it is only fair to your friend that you make it right with your mother. Talk to her quite frankly and explain the situation. When you have convinced her that this young man is worthy of your friendship ask her to write him a note inviting him to call. This is proper because she objected to his calling on you and it is she who should take the first step toward renewing the friendship.

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her in care of this office.

Education Speaks

I am education. I bear the torch that enlightens the world, fires the imagination of man, feeds the flame of genius. I give wings to dreams and might to hand and brain.

From out the deep shadows of the past I come, wearing the scars of struggle and the stripes of toil, but bearing in triumph the wisdom of all ages. Man because of me holds dominion over earth, air and sea; it is for him I leash the lightning, plumb the deep and shackle the ether.

I am the parent of progress, creator of culture, molder of destiny. Philosophy, science and art are the works of my hand. I banish ignorance, discouraging vice, drown anarchy.

Thus have I become freedom's citadel, the arm of democracy, the hope of youth, the pride of adolescence, the joy of age. Fortunate the nations and happy the homes that welcome me.

The school is my workshop; here I stir ambitions, stimulate ideals, forge the keys that open the door to opportunity. I am the source of inspiration; the aid of aspiration. I am irresistible power. Better Schools league.

VOTERS OF ETOWAH WILL DECIDE TAX

(Associated Press)

GADSDEN, Ala., Nov. 21—Voters of Etowah county will show their approval or disapproval of the entire school system of the county on December 15, when an election will be held to determine whether the three-mill and one-mill tax now levied for school purposes shall be continued after the time limit fixed by law expires. The taxes now in effect were voted in until next October.

County commissioners have agreed to hold the election in December in response to a petition bearing approximately 1,000 signatures. County Superintendent of Education E. P. Murphy was a moving factor in the work of getting the election. He has stated that such action is necessary to preserve the "splendid schools that have been established in the county during the past few years."

Mr. Murphy has explained that rural districts cannot levy their special three-mill tax without the authorization of the voters at the coming election. Failure to obtain this authorization would be a "calamity" he said.

School officials and others identified with the county school system are already expressing confidence in the outcome of the election. They believe that the majority of the citizens of the county have already realized the benefits derived from the special taxes.

One of the main arguments expected to be put before the voters of

SATURDAY NEWS LETTER

News Bits Gathered From The Four Corners Of The Earth By The Associated Press

LONDON, Nov. 21—Several thousand of the 15,000 drink shops in the Irish free state will be wiped out if the recommendations of the government commission which has been inquiring into liquor traffic are adopted.

These recommendations would leave one drinking place for every 400 of population, or about 400,000 for the whole country. The liquor sellers who would remain in business would be obligated to compensate those forced out by a levy.

Selling of liquor on Sunday would not be abolished but travelers, to whom liquor may be sold on Sunday would be required to travel 10 miles instead of three as at present, to qualify as bona fide travelers. The idea of making St. Patrick's day, March 17, wholly dry, has been abandoned and the commission has recommended that this holiday take the same status as Sunday.

The commission recommends that drunkards on their third conviction be jailed without being given the option of a fine and that driving an automobile while intoxicated be made punishable by cancellation of the driving license and imprisonment.

The commission reports a marked diminution in drunkenness throughout Ireland. In 1870 convictions for drunkenness in all Ireland reached 85,870 while in 1924 for the free state they were reduced to 6,862. This is attributed mainly to the high price of alcoholic drinks, caused by war taxation, which the commission would have continued.

Over-fed husbands have become a great problem in England and a celebrated English dietitian says indulgent wives are responsible for the large proportion of men with digestive troubles.

"Women are much less inclined to eat too much," says the specialist. "They have an uncanny sense about eating. They will give their husbands all sorts of heavy indigestible food. The men eat immoderately while their wives go through the same meal scarcely tasting the dishes which they prepare for their husbands. The result is that men have much more trouble with the digestive organs than women. Men eat too much meat, too much bread, too many potatoes, too many heavy sweets. Gluttons are rare among women. The sex is too wise to gorge itself."

It is the mannequin mania now instead of stage-struck daughters. Ever the chorus girls who were stage-struck once have a hankering under the changed conditions to become models and have shown an eagerness to desert the footlights because of the more attractive work and the better pay.

Professional singers, school teachers, nurses and stenographers and women in many other professions have neglected their old callings in Manchester, Liverpool, Leeds and other English cities being keen to acquire the splendid manners of a millionairess for a few hours each day at least.

Suzanne Lenglen lost a diamond arrow last year while she was playing on the center court at Wimbledon and inquiries brought no results. When Suzanne was playing a short time ago on the same court she mentioned the loss to one of the attendants, who immediately restored the lost jewel, saying he had kept it because no inquiries had reached him and he did not know who the owner was.

Mlle. Lenglen immediately pinned the arrow into the bandeau about her head and wore it throughout her successful games in the Cromer tournament during which she played so vigorously that she had to change her gown and bandeau three times each day.

"The Oxford voice" is to be broadcast throughout England. It has been the subject of much unfavorable comment in England, and is supposed to be something which should be avoided will not wear Oxford bags. But England must hear "the Oxford voice" whether it wants to or not.

A radio broadcasting station is to be opened at Oxford which will reach every part of the British Isles with talks on every phase of university life. In many sections of England the public insists the average Oxford man speaks in a manner which is entirely unintelligible to ordinary human beings, but the British broadcasting company has decided to chance it.

PARIS, Nov. 21—"Foreign office trousers" and other accessories of formal morning or afternoon dress for diplomats are fast going out of style in international gatherings in European capitals.

"Foreign office trousers" is the name given those striped garments of black or gray which normally accompany a cut-away or frock coat, white or gray spats, an impeccable waistcoat of gray, black or white, and of course, gloves and a topcoat. A gardenia in the buttonhole and a monocle in the eye add greatly to the effect of the ensemble.

But at the last session of the league of nations council held in Paris not one of the representatives of the 10 powers having seats on that august body wore correct diplomatic garb—not even Austen Chamberlain, emissary of that sartorially fastidious land, England. All he had of the usual get-up was a monocle and he discarded that for ordinary, horn-rimmed spectacles whenever he had to read. Foreign Minister Briand of France, was a usual nonchalant and democratic in his attire. Even so polished a statesman as Viscount Ishii of Japan, was in a sack suit, while the two South American representatives, Senor Mello Franco of Brazil, and Senor Guanilo, of Uruguay, usually most punctilious were similarly garbed. The only concession to the formalities that the assembled statesmen made was to wear stiff collars and those of rather ancient vintage.

Conscientious newspaper correspondents who donned their best formal togs in honor of the councils, swore next time they "covered" the sessions of the league's governing body they would be garbed in "plush" and "furs."

"The time for universal suffrage in France is approaching," this announcement by Henri Roger, dean of the Corbonne faculty of medicine, brought wild cheers from the delegates to the convention of the French league of women's rights.

That French women are slowly awakening to a sense of political responsibility was the tenor of the whole series of meetings held here this week and it was emphasized by the secretary's report on the work of the year throughout the country.

Suffragists from all parts of the world have been invited to attend an international suffrage conference in Paris next May. Among the American leaders expected to attend are Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Charlotte Gilman and Martin Crampton.

There may be some hidden unpleasant feelings in the French breast over the outcome of the Washington debt negotiations but if there is, it doesn't show in the cabarets where topical songs on that rather ticklish situation are sung.

There in the "Vachenagee" or "maddened cow" the skit on Uncle Sam is always well received. After a chanted version of M. Caillaux's claims, the chansonniers cheerily invites our lanky national figure to come on over to France and have not one drink but several. "Fill up your lamp over here, Sam," the song winds up, "and then you'll forget about such a little thing as money."

To which the montmartre audience, accustomed to seeing some of Uncle Sam's nephews doing something lik that every night, heartily agrees with roars of applause.

The same holds true of "The Two Donkeys," a sprightly little cabaret song, "Mr. Coolidge Have Pity on Us," has had a long run. The burden of it is that France has exported more than enough of her national treasures to America to balance the scores. "Why we even sent you Cavi Sorel and Clemenceau," the songster explains; adding, however, "still it's true you didn't exactly ask for that pair."

At the "Ten O'clock Theater," newest of the Parisian entertainment ventures of the sort, and at the old "Noctambules" dean of the Latin quarter song centers, the reception given to jibes at America is the same. Americans in the audience are no molested and when they understand the songs they usually have the tact to join in the general laugh. "The Cave of the Red Oubliettes," a reopened cabaret of the left bank dodges the debt subject by prescribing that all songs rendered there must be at least one hundred years old.

Broadway came to the boulevard recently when the Parisian took to the "quick lunch" plan. A sign on a restaurant just around the corner from the boulevard montmartre read "Patrons who lunch here between 1 o'clock and noon will be given a reduction of 25 centimes. Think of others and hurry up."

BERLIN, Nov. 21—German women and girls still are far behind those of the United States in the art of applying cosmetics, is the conclusion reached by a well-known socialist member of the reichstag, who has returned to Germany from America where he was a delegate to the congress of the interparliamentary union at Washington.

Admitting that the Parisienne lead the maids of Berlin in this respect, he is inclined to award the palm for "rapid painting" to American femininity whose dexterity, a wielding the powder puff and lip stick stunned him.

"American women still are influenced by the recollection of the customs of the American Indians, who were adept at applying pigments to their faces before entering into the chase on scouting expeditions," observe this critic in the official bulletin of the socialist democratic party. He expresses amazement over the freedom and alacrity with which facial adornments are applied in full view of the public. "It seems, however, to be a very simple operation," he continues. "One morning I encountered in the aisle of a Pullman sleeper a lady who in the course of the night had changed from what had seemed to me to be a boarding school Miss into a venerable looking matron. An hour later I discovered her in the dining car, completely rejuvenated with the aid of her rouge and lipstick."

Reichstag members returning from the Washington gathering are regaling German newspaper readers with rollicks of American impressions which are about equally divided between comments on economic matters and on the part played by women in American life.

In the mysterious statue known as the "Attila Goddess" acquired by the Berlin museum for 1,000,000 marks, a genuine production of ancient Greece and was the purchase negotiated through legitimate channels?

These questions recently have been causing a heated debate in the Prussian Diet, where the nationalists introduced a motion to restrain the ministry of art, education and science from appropriating funds for buying the much-discussed Greek statue. Various critics have declined to pronounce the piece genuine until the ministry divulges the origin of the statue and identifies the parties who have offered it for sale.

Other members of the diet hotly oppose the participation with state funds and insist that the million marks should be diverted for the relief of hundreds of impecunious German artists who are scarcely able to keep body and soul together.

A German-Austrian union has been organized to promote economic relations and keep alive cultural understanding between the two countries in preparation for a time when Austria may unite with Germany.

Among the members of the executive council of the union are Karl Jarres, nationalist candidate for president, who withdrew in favor of President Von Hindenburg and who is now mayor of Duisburg; Count Hugo Lerchenfeld, former Bavarian premier, and Dr. Ricarda Huch, author.

Explaining the objects of the union, Franz Schweyer, Bavarian minister of the interior said he was aware that the purposes of the union might be misconstrued by some allied circles.

"The union is a non-partisan, non-propagandist organization," Herr Schweyer said, "fully aware that a union in Austria with Germany would not be countenanced by the allied powers at present. The union will attempt to pave the way for complete understanding in anticipation of the union of the two countries. Racially and culturally the two peoples are so closely related that Austria might well be a part of Germany."

An improved "magic word" said to be capable of indicating the presence of coal, oil, metals, salts or water in the earth has been invented by Prof. Mindrop of the Bochum school of Mines.

Experiments with the new word are said to have been so successful that Prof. Mindrop has been invited by the bureau of mines of the Dutch government to determine the extent of coal and ore deposits at Maurik, Holland.

The wand contains undisclosed magnetic substances, laid on the surface of the earth, an indicator in the tubes is said to register the presence of values mineral elements far below the surface. Similar wands heretofore Prof. Mindrop claims, have disclosed only the presence of metallic elements.

Game Little Decatur Eleven Rushes Hanceville Huskies Into 6-0 Defeat

The game little Decatur high school eleven Friday afternoon rushed through, over and around their heavier opponents from Hanceville to win a 6 to 0 victory on Riverview field in a game marked by brilliant runs and sturdy defense. Two opportunities were presented Hanceville to score, but on both occasions the defense of the gold and black rose to the occasion and the thrust was repulsed. Decatur was given the same number of chances and made one of them good.

By a curious twist, runs by Vines around his own right end twice placed the ball on Decatur's eleven yard line, but there the advance was stopped and West kicked out of danger. The local kicker's long spirals carried well and gave the Hanceville backs considerable difficulty in handling. Gunn usually was down on punts so quickly Hanceville's returns of kicks gained practically nothing.

West, in fact, spent quite a busy afternoon. Aside from helping back up the line, do the kicking and the passing, running interference and hitting the line five times in succession during the touchdown march, West had little to do. Oldacre and Bailey gave several exhibitions of fancy and assorted open field running, while Namie twice got away for substantial gains. Bailey also showed well on the defense, several times smashing through and getting a runner on or behind the line of scrimmage. Phillips at tackle turned in an excellent report for his afternoon's endeavor. Despite his apparent nonchalance, he quite made up in activity what he lacked in poundage and seemed to experience little difficulty in brushing aside his opponent and sifting through to nab at the heels of opposition backfield men. In fact every man on the Decatur line played well. Robertson, Hallmark, Conley, Lanier, Price, King, Gunn, Oldacre, Roberts during the drive which netted victory turned from the defense to the offense and opened gaping holes through which West plunged to victory.

The line ups:

HIGH SCHOOL TURNED BACK BY HEAVIER "Y" ELEVEN 20-0

Albany Stops Rush In First Half, Gaining Scoreless Tie.

Y COMES BACK IN LAST HALF

Backfield Smashes Into High Line For Three Markers

Hopelessly outweighed and out-gained, but lacking in grit and determination the Albany High school was swept off its feet in the last half of an encounter with the Y. M. C. A. aggregation Friday afternoon at Malone Park 20-0. The high lads buckled into defensive work in the first half and abetted by fumbles on the part of the "Y" backfield and the infliction of numerous penalties one of which went for 50 yards just after the Y outfit had plunged across the line for a touchdown in the second quarter when the Y had 12 men on the field, held the heavier team scoreless for the first 30 minutes of play.

The lighter high school team was unable to plunge the line successfully and registered but one first down, that as the result of a toss from Perie to Pappenburg.

Things started moving fast for the Y aggregation in the third quarter and dashing off tackle around the ends and several completed passes brought the oval into scoring distance. Brown, Johnson and McRee smashed the high line consistently, with Ellison doing the chunking in the aerial attacks.

All things were apparently even in the first quarter, the Y. M. C. A. driving to the 20 yard line but being unable to go farther when the High line held. In the second quarter the Y resumed their offensive but was unable to push across for a counter. It was towards the middle of this quarter that the Y launched across the remaining white line only to have the score taken from them with the infliction of a fifty yard penalty when Means was substituted at left guard for Robertson.

In the third quarter Kirby kicked to Hurst for no return. The Y was offside on the first play. A pass failed. Bishop hit the line twice for an aggregate of two yards. Mitchell kicked 25 yards out of bounds. It was the Y's ball on their own 30 yard line. McRee made 9 at the line, then made 10 in a smash in the same sector, the left side of his own line. Johnson made a yard at left tackle then took a pass from Ellison that was good for first down. McRee took five in two attempts, a pass failed then "Mac" made 8 through left tackle for first down. Johnson ripped right tackle for 4. Brown went in for Morrow at half. Brown took the oval to the high 10 yard line on the first attempt. McRee smashed through for 8. Brown was chased out of bounds at right end for no gain. Time out for Ellison. He stayed. Brown and McRee made it first down on the high 2 yard line. Brown got a yard and a half. McRee took center for the touchdown. Johnson kicked the goal. Score Y 7, Albany 0.

Brown kicked to Thompson who made no return. Bishop and Perie lost 1 in two attempts with Kirby and Roper breaking through. A pass failed and Mitchell kicked 30 yards to Johnson, the ball going between his legs and rolling 20 more. Johnson took the oval off his own goal line and returned 12 yards. Brown took a 25 yard jaunt around his own left end with good interference as the third quarter ended.

Ellison dashed around right end for 12 and the Y was penalized 25 yards for clipping. Two line plays failed and Brown kicked to Perie who fumbled when Howell tackled. Thombs recovering near the center of the field. Bishop failed at right guard, a pass from Perie to Pappenburg was good for 10 yards and first down. McRee intercepted an Albany toss. Brown made 1, Ellison passed to McRee for 7, McRee made it first down at left guard. Ellison passed Johnson for 10 yards and the defensive half back traveled 35 yards through a broken field being stopped on the high 5 yard line. Brown tried it over on the first play through right tackle. Johnson failed to the goal. Y 13, Albany 0.
